Help us test a new program to improve outcomes for youth on the autism spectrum through parental advocacy

Help us learn
Transitioning for school-based to adult service systems is challenging for many families of youth on the autism spectrum. Volunteer for research testing a new program to improve parents’ ability to advocate for adult services on behalf of their son or daughter on the autism spectrum.

Who
Parents of youth with an autism spectrum disorder diagnosis between 16 and 26 years of age

What you will do
- Psychological testing of youth
- Participate in a person-centered planning session
- Weekly virtual group-based parent advocacy training sessions for 12 weeks (until it is safe to offer in-person sessions at the Waisman Center)
- Questionnaires and follow-up interviews for parents and youth may last up to 3.5 years

Families will receive up to $425 for completing all parts of the study.

Contact:
transition@waisman.wisc.edu
(608) 265-3165

This study is funded by the National Institute of Mental Health.

Institutional Review Board